film corner country

The Corner Country of outback New South Wales lies to the north and west of Broken Hill. It follows the rugged Barrier Ranges towards Tibooburra, sweeps west across the Mundi Mundi Plain and merges with the sand dunes and jumpups of the Simpson Strzelecki Dunefields. Big skies, red dirt, and with all the magic of outback locations.

Steeped in history, the Corner Country is today home to just a handful of people, each fired with a spirit of adventure, friendly and willing to just be involved.

local services

Locations

The Corner Country lies within the Unincorporated Area of New South Wales, with the historic townships of Milparinka and Tibooburra being the major population centres.

Sturt National Park surrounds Tibooburra, extending north and west to the dingo fence, with the balance of land in the region being occupied as station property.

Accommodation

The township of Tibooburra has the largest collection of accommodation places in the area, ranging from quality hotel/motel rooms to cabins.

Accommodation is also available on a number of station properties, in homes, separate houses or shearers' quarters.

Catering

There are a number of catering options, from local businesses to community organisations.

Access

Access to the region is generally through Broken Hill, with hire cars (4WD) available from several outlets. The Silver City Highway runs north towards Tibooburra and is mostly sealed. All other roads are unsealed.

Air access is also available, with aircraft charter hire from Broken Hill. Tibooburra has an all weather airstrip and most station properties have RFDS strips.

Communication

The Corner Country has telephone service in all areas, and Next G mobile in many locations. Wireless broadband is available in Tibooburra
