Tibooburra - Corner Country - Sturt NP - Cooper Creek - Coongie Lakes - Innamincka - Strzelecki Desert

“Definitely the best way to experience the vastness of the outback”

Strzelecki Desert

THIS YEAR ESPECIALLY, ROAD ACCESS TO SOME AREAS IS LIMITED. THE RARE COMMODITY OF RAIN, HAS CREATED A VISUAL SPLENDOUR.... AN EXPLORER'S DREAM.

From the air one can appreciate the changes from seemingly endless sand dunes to timeless rivers and creeks which have been etched into this ancient landscape.

Mt Poole, Evelyn Creek

Aviation began just half a century after Sturt's (1845) inland expedition . Sturt equipped the expedition with a boat to sail on an imagined sea. Burke, Wills, King and Gray (1861) travelled these unknown remote landscapes not knowing what was ahead of them in a mad rush to the North. Just 150 years on, see the vast landscapes for yourself.

The Dig Tree Cooper Creek Queensland: Brahe left Camp LXV (Camp 65) on Cooper Creek on Sunday, 21 April 1861 after a long wait of 18 weeks. Burke, Wills and King returned that evening with the depot and camp deserted. They dug up supplies and a letter explaining that the party had given up waiting for them. Burke's team had missed Brahe by 9 hours. The three men were exhausted and had no hope of catching up to the Brahe's party.

Coongie Lakes system is listed as a Ramsar Wetland for its importance in providing a unique environment for plants and animals within this desert region.. The Innamincka Regional Reserve is similar in area to the Lake Eyre National Park. These ephemeral wetlands have since filled this year after heavy rains in Feb and March 2010. The only way to see Coongie lakes this year is from the air.
